Permit Needed for Stubble Burning In Kneehill M. D.

The Municipal Council of Kneehill No. 48, at a meeting in the municipal office, Three Hills on Monday, May 14, passed a motion supporting the Agricultural Service Board's recommendation that burning of stubble be prohibited in Kneehill M.D. unless the Field supervisor and the local councillor, or the Council as a whole, give approval.

Land on which stubble, including straw in the swath, is burned, without a permit, will be inspected by the Board, and if found that it is becoming debilitated through wind or water erosion, or that the land may become a menace to the community, the Board will recommend to the Council that this land be declared subject to supervision and if necessary, reclamation under section 13, and 15 of the Agricultural Service Board Act.

Burn your stubble and kill your soil. Persist in burning your stubble, without a permit, and be liable to lose control of your land under a resolution by the Council declaring the land under reclamation. This action is considered necessary in the best interests of all who depend on the soil for a living.

Housing In Canada

HOUSING HAS BEEN a problem in almost every community in Canada during the past five years. Curtailment of building for civilian purposes during the last war caused an accumulated need for new houses and for repairs to older homes and this shortage was aggravated by the fact that in the years of financial depression which preceded the war, lack of funds for construction work had caused a decrease in the normal building activity. Increases in the number of families, and the return of men from war service placed a great demand on housing after the war, and in spite of extensive building programmes in all parts of the country, this demand has not yet been met. High costs of building materials and shortages of labour have been obstacles in the way of many plans for home building and it appears that this situation will be even more acute in the future.

Some Buildings Not Completed

A report on building conditions in 1950, issued by the Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation, showed that in spite of rising costs 67,900 new homes were started in the first nine months of 1950, but due to difficulties in securing labour and materials some of these buildings were not completed. Materials increased in cost by fifteen per cent. in that time, and the 371,000 construction workers in Canada could not fill the demands for their services. Wages rose by some four per cent. in that period, and there have been further increases in the costs of both labour and material. The report showed that of the 67,900 homes started in Canada between January and October, 1950, 17,000 were in areas with populations of less than 5,000.

Shortages In Other Places

Although more than 200,000 housing units were constructed in the first four years after the war, it is apparent that there is still a need for new houses, and that rising costs are likely to obstruct building activities. It must be remembered that this situation has not been confined to Canada alone. There have been acute housing shortages in other places, and conditions here have not been unduly hard when compared to those in Great Britain, France and some parts of the United States. However, inadequate housing gives rise to many problems including health, juvenile delinquency and other matters related to the welfare of the people, and the need for homes, especially in the lower price ranges, remains a national problem which concerns many people, in all parts of Canada.

VICTORIA, B.C.—One of the happiest and most determined men in Victoria these days is William J. Hyde, 81-year-old curling enthusiast. Hyde's happiness stems from his showing in the fifth annual Nanaimo bonspiel recently. A curler for 50 years, Hyde had been away from the game for seven years before he entered the Nanaimo event as a member of Max Zabel's Victoria rink, which reached the finals in two events and the semi-finals in a third. Zabel's rink was skipped by Bill Grey, who captained the Alberta champions in the Macdonald Brier event at Halifax last Autumn.

● Scald 2 1/2 c. cream, 2 tbs. granulated sugar, 1 tsp. salt and 3/4 c. shortening; cool to lukewarm. Meanwhile, measure into a large bowl 1 1/2 c. lukewarm water, 1 tsp. granulated sugar; stir until sugar is dissolved. Sprinkle with 1 envelope Fleischmann's Fast Rising Dry Yeast. Let stand 10 minutes. THEN stir well.

Add cooled cream mixture and stir in 3 well-beaten eggs. Stir in 2 c. once-sifted bread flour; beat until smooth. Work in 2 1/2 c. (about) once-sifted bread flour. Knead on lightly-floured board until smooth and elastic. Place in greased bowl and grease top of dough. Cover and set in a warm place, free from draught. Let rise until doubled in bulk. Mix 3/4 c. granulated sugar and 2 tps. ground cinnamon; sprinkle half of this mixture on baking board. Divide dough into 2 equal portions and turn out one portion onto prepared board. Roll out into a 12" square; fold from back to front and from one side to the other. Repeat rolling and folding 3 more times, flouring board lightly if it becomes sticky. Seal edges of folded dough and place in a greased 8" square cake pan and pat out to fit the pan; butter top lightly and press walnut halves well into the dough. Sprinkle remaining sugar and cinnamon mixture on board and treat second portion of dough same as first portion. Cover and let rise until doubled in bulk. Bake in a moderate oven, 350°, 15 mins., while preparing the following syrup; simmer together for 5 mins., 1 c. granulated sugar, 1 1/2 tps. grated orange rind, 1/4 c. butter or margarine and 1/4 c. orange juice. Quickly pour hot syrup over the 2 partially-baked cakes and bake cakes about 15 mins. longer. Stand baked cakes on cake coolers for 20 minutes, then loosen edges and gently shake from pans.

Common Enemy Waits to Strike Both U.N. and Red Forces in Korea

By JOHN F. SEMBOWER
(CPC Correspondent)

WASHINGTON.—Among the big question marks about the Korean campaign, none is regarded here as more crucial than whether the Red Chinese and North Korean armies are hit as hard by disease as reports indicate.

Not only are appraisals of enemy strength greatly affected, but any mass disease infecting a foe is added challenge to the health and sanitation precautions of the U.N. armed forces.

As one military health authority put it: If the Reds are blighted as thoroughly with typhus fever, typhoid, smallpox and the bubonic plague as persistent reports from China maintain, the U.N. will get a partial dress rehearsal in combatting germ warfare, because these infections figure prominently in any pattern of biological attack.

First reports that a disease is striking down the Red Chinese "like flies", filtered across the lines about three months ago, when the Red offensive, which started with the mass crossing of the Yalu river, came to a shuddering halt.

U.N. commanders, while aware of their mounting strength relatively and their improved supply position, were inclined to admit that something besides their bombs, shells and bullets appeared suddenly to slow the enemy.

In the time elapsing before the start of the present offensive the Red armies had time to make some improvement in their medical prevention technique, but it sounds plausible that typhus or typhoid, traditional bogey of armies in the field, which, like most Far Eastern forces, are careless about personal and group sanitation, which has struck and is not completely conquered.

U.N. intelligence officers were baffled, however, by their inability to find specific evidence that disease is running rampant. Have the Red leaders, with the subtlety which has marked their leadership all along, cleverly concealed the ill and dying and even carefully removed the dead?

New reports since have come from several sources that a particularly virulent form of typhus virus has killed more than 20,000 Red soldiers, and hit the civilian population even harder. A Peking Red radio broadcast told of special medical teams being rushed from China into Korea.

For a time stories leaked through the Red Chinese version of the Iron Curtain that hospitals everywhere in North Korea and China were choked with the deathly ill, available serums had lost their strength, doctors were lacking and medical supplies exhausted.

It is a familiar pattern which has been etched into the records of armies through the ages, pestilential diseases usually counting for higher mortality than the lethal efforts of the opposition in virtually all except the most modern armies in recent years.

The American army was hit harder by yellow fever than by the Spaniards in the Spanish-American war (1898). Cholera mowed down the French and English in the Crimea. Typhoid hobbled the British against the Boers in South Africa (1899-1902). Flu became a world-wide plague in World War I (1914-1918).

However, of all the diseases that attack great masses of men, typhoid fever was, and is, the most dreaded. Surprisingly enough, the Japanese in the Russo-Japanese war are credited with developing field sanitation measures which still are followed widely by armies all over the world. By defeating typhoid, rather than just Russia, Japan became a major military power until crushed in World War II.

The Japanese attacked the infection at its source—the waste of an army. No soldier was permitted to drink water unless it was boiled, and every field unit, however small, had its portable boiling kit. Each night garbage and waste was meticulously burned.

Because there still is no specific cure for typhoid once it is caught, and occasionally men who have been inoculated contract it, the U.N. medical corps is relieved by present indications that it is typhus, not typhoid, that is the nemesis of the Red Chinese.

Typhus, carried largely by body lice, can be one of the most deadly diseases known. It is hard to nurse it under any but the most ideal conditions, and therefore it often runs rampant in an army which is careless of cleanliness.

The disease induces a stupor which requires careful forced feedings at one and one-half hour intervals, and numerous other periodic attentions, the lack of which kills the victim and yet which usually are unavailable in the field. Opium, the most available sedative to the Red Chinese, had a bad effect and cannot be used.

The U.N. forces are not so worried about smallpox or even the bubonic plague. The former can be prevented by universal vaccination. The latter is dangerous, but apparently much more so to easterners than to occidentals, who mysteriously have displayed a rather general natural immunity ever since the Black Death ravaged Europe in the middle ages.

In fact, malaria looms as a greater menace to U.N. forces than either of these, with the mosquito season at hand in the rice paddies, and the accidental being more susceptible to the malarial than the oriental. But U.N. medical groups feel that they are ready for it, the danger having long been anticipated and the preventive measures planned.

"THE CHESS GAME"

Canadians Have More Invested In U.S. Than Americans In Canada

DETROIT.—Canada's first problem is manpower, Francis G. Winspear of Edmonton, president of the Canadian Chamber of Commerce, said in an address to the Economic Club at Detroit.

Canada, he stated, is a country of fabulous wealth, greater in area than the United States, but with only 14,000,000 people, and a labor force of only some 5,000,000. "Shortage of manpower is her bugbear; shortage, too, of technical skill."

Mr. Winspear said that in the last few years the ratio of Canadian investment in Canada's industrial and mining resources has increased, and the ratio of outside or foreign investment has decreased (despite high American investment).

"And this may surprise you: the average Canadian has more money invested in the United States than the average American has invested in Canada; for per capita investment of Canadians in the United States is some $64; while per capita investment of Americans in Canada is some $40."

If the water in the world's lakes was added to the oceans, it would raise the water level two feet, it is estimated.

Brush Up On Ankle Etiquette

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J.—Been neglecting your "ankle etiquette", girls? One man thinks you have, and that you are in danger of losing your "inborn traditional coquetry" in moving and posturing your ankles and legs.

Roy E. Tilles, hosiery company executive attending a meeting of the industry here, said "a generation of sloppy shoes and bobby socks" is to blame for the loss of a sense of ankle etiquette.

Wonderful as nylon stockings are, "they can't do everything," said Mr. Tilles.

Here's his advice to the ladies: Relearn how to walk alluringly, how to cross your knees gracefully, sit attractively, and make seam-straightening as much a reflex as using a lipstick.

Dealer Accepts 1914 Model As Trade-In On New Car

BOZEMAN, Mont. — Perhaps "the old grey mare ain't what she used to be," but Mrs. Rose A. Currier's 1914 model T Ford was good enough to trade in on a new 1951 model.

Mrs. Currier, former vaudeville actress, came here from Springdale with the antiquated model. It was complete with carbide lamps and three-inch pneumatic tires.

The dealer who handled the transaction said the car was "in tip-top shape."

The Club return was won by South and his ♠ K was taken by West, who led ♠ 9 to South's ♠ 10. East declined to play ♠ K when ♠ 10 was finessed at the next trick, but South did not fall for this ruse. On The Side : By E. V. Durling

A puzzler that continues to baffle many people is that celebrated problem of the yesteryear: "How old is Anne?" A man named John Mahon started the ball rolling on this problem in 1903 when he wrote the following: "Mary is 24 years old. She is twice as old as Anne was when she was as old as Anne is now. How old is Anne now? A says the answer is sixteen. B says twelve. Which is correct?"

They Swooned 100 Years Ago

Is there a heart-throb among the present-day concert artists? I mean a violinist or a pianist who thrills the feminine clientele? Franz Liszt, the great Hungarian pianist and composer, was such an artist. At his concerts many of his feminine admirers were so overcome they swooned. That was one hundred years before Sinatra. Liszt was quite a character. He had in his wardrobe sixty fancy waistcoats and a different necktie for every day in the year. At twenty-two he passed up all the bachelorettes, who were wild about him, and married a widow twenty years older than he was. By her he had three children. This widow, the Comtesse d'Agouti, was quite a character, too, in her fashion. She was a chain cigar smoker.

Nothing New In That

Note kiss-proof lipstick referred to as "something new". Nonsense. They had kiss-proof lipstick in England 295 years ago. It is mentioned in a book of advice on acquiring beauty, published in 1665. Title of this book is "Artificial embellishments or art's best directions on how to preserve beauty or procure it." Incidentally, in those days all the women wanted to be brunettes, as that type was definitely preferred by the gentlemen of the period. It was believed then that black hair was a sign of "passion and constancy" in a woman.

Prize Cocktail

Are you a cocktail enthusiast? Are you willing to admit the most potent of all cocktails is the Martini? Have you ever originated a cocktail? By the way, the recent European cocktail competition, in which 250 famous bartenders participated, was won by P. Razouvaieff, of l'Aperitif Grill, Jermyn St., London. The winning cocktail is called a "Rye Lane" and the recipe is as follows: "One-third rye whisky, one-third white curacao, one-third orange squash, two dashes creme de noyau de kuyper. Shake."

Better To Be Thin

Can a direct answer of "yes" or "no" be made to the following question? All things being equal, is the life expectancy of a thin man greater than that of a fat man? The direct answer to that query is "yes". Incidentally, they say a tall, thin man of Scottish birth or descent has the greatest life expectancy.

Starting Young

When Lester Piggott, Britain's "boy wonder" jockey, won his first race he was only twelve years old. "Certainly wonderful to win a race at your age," a reporter said as the lad dismounted. "Oh, I don't know," said Lester. "My grandpa won his first race when he was nine years old." Lester's grandpa was the great jockey, Tom Cannon.

Treasures Of Royal Houses Well Guarded

MONTREAL. — A throne worth $30,000,000, ropes of pearls six feet long and chests overflowing with jewels are not very startling to Hon. George Charles Hayter Chubb of London.

They aren't his, of course, but Chubb's firm, a lock and safe company, has the job of guarding them among other almost priceless treasures of the world's monarchs.

The throne is the fabulous peacock throne of Persia and it is in a burglar-proof room designed by Mr. Chubb's company.

"The floor is literally strewn with expensive baubles, such as gold swords," he said during a recent visit here. "Chests are scattered about, spilling precious stones. There is even a globe of the world two feet in diameter, made of solid gold."

Guarding such treasure is an old story in the Chubb family. When his great-great-grandfather won a $500 prize for designing a good lock, King George II was so taken with it he sent all the Royal business to him. Since then business has snowballed.

Right now Mr. Chubb is concerned with the British Crown jewels to be displayed at the Festival of Britain. The family guarded the valuables at the 1851 festival, among them the koh-i-noor diamond.

To guard the magnificent diamond, Chubb's built a gigantic "parrot cage" around the gem. At night, when the display is closed, a spring was touched and the diamond sank into a massive iron box which in turn disappeared into a pedestal of solid masonry.

Chubb's will be doing a similar job with the British Crown jewels during the Festival of Britain this year.

The most unusual job the firm had to tackle was an order from an Indian Maharajah for strong boxes for the jewelry of his 17 wives. Chubb's made the boxes, each with an individual lock and key. The women were delighted with this bit of privacy but they under-rated the Maharajah and Chubb's. The Maharajah had a master key fitting all 17 boxes.

MADISON, Wis.—Left-handed persons are closer to being ambidextrous than right-handed folks, according to three University of Wisconsin psychologists.

The psychologists tested 64 students and found that the southpaws could handle tasks with either hand better than right-handed subjects. They also found that left-handed persons could move their favored hands much faster between knobs on a control panel than their right hands. Right-handed subjects, they learned, moved both hands about the same speed.

Pitch For The Weak Spots

Research in baseball by men in the Big Leagues has shown that certain types of pitches thrown over certain areas of the plate are hit less than any others. Generally, batters have the most trouble with balls thrown to the high inside corner of the strike area, and to the low outside.

When pitching to a man you know is a good hitter with no outstanding weaknesses, aiming at either of these two spots will pay off most often. The high inside pitch is possibly the best, and is most effective when there is a slight incurve (toward a right handed hitter). This means that if it is hit, the ball won't travel hard or far because it will make contact close to the handle of the bat.

The low, outside pitch is usually best when thrown with an outcurve, (away from a right handed hitter).

Is "Runners' Nausea" Dangerous?

Often a track man will feel sick after a hard workout or race. This condition is a natural reaction when the athlete drives himself beyond normal limits, and it should not be a source of worry.

To avoid it, start your training easily and build up gradually the amount of training you do each day. Be careful of what you eat before a workout, and make sure you don't eat at all for two and a half to three hours before a workout or race. Taking three or four soda mint tablets an hour before the workout often helps.

Research into this problem on members of the Sports College Track and Field Testing Group such as Rich Ferguson, North American indoor interscholastic mile champion, revealed that Yogurt is excellent in relieving such nausea. When made a part of the regular diet, and also taken about one hour before activity, it brought complete relief from stomach distress. Information on Yogurt can be obtained through Sports College.

The main thing, however, is not to let such nausea worry you, or spoil your determination to work hard.

Differences In Hitting Position Between Softball And Hardball

Eighty-five per cent. of all strikeouts in softball are a result of hitting under the ball, research shows. Most softball pitchers deliver the ball from fairly close to the ground, much lower than in hardball. This means it will usually be travelling at an upward angle when it reaches the plate.

If the batter takes a normal hardball ready-to-hit position, he will thus be inclined to hit under the ball, and either pop up or miss it completely.

As a result, it's smart to hold your arms and bat a little higher than usual when batting against a pitcher who has a low delivery and slants the ball upwards. Try to hit slightly downward as you swing, so that your bat moves into the line of flight rather than across it.

If the pitcher is tossing "drops", you should, of course, change to a lower ready-to-hit position.

KITCHEN MEDITATIONS

By JANE DALE

A FOREST TREE

If I could be the tallest tree;
To touch the summer sky,
I'd think it well if I could dwell
In this forest till I die.

If I could rise to starlit skies;
To brush each fleecy cloud,
I'd gladly bear each season's care
And the tempest's raging loud.

If from great heights I could see delights
Not seen by earthbound trees,
I'd count well the cost of being lost
In forests such as these.

TO RECRUIT WORKERS FROM EAST

Shortage Of Farm Labor Being Experienced In Western Districts

EDMONTON.—Representatives of four western provinces and the federal government met here recently to work out arrangements for shifting farm workers this season to areas where labor shortages exist.

The meeting noted shortages of farm labor are already being experienced in some western districts and the situation is expected to become more acute as the season progresses.

In Winnipeg, H. R. Richardson, of the provincial farm help service, said Manitoba had a satisfactory supply of farm labor for spring operations. The labor supply during harvest, he said, could not be predicted. It depended on the need for workers by competing industries.

The first movement of workers in eastern Canada this year will be to the Fraser valley in British Columbia for picking of the small fruit crop, particularly strawberries and raspberries. Some 250 women from Alberta and Saskatchewan will also be recruited.

In Saskatoon, R. H. Bowers, manager of the national employment office, said only half of 600 men needed for general farm work, exclusive of harvesting, have been obtained.

Threshing is not completed in Unity, Wilkie and Senlas areas. About 10 municipalities are involved. As much as 40 to 50 per cent. of the 1950 crop has not yet been harvested.

Expert Believes Weather Control Is Possible

VICTORIA, B.C.—The man who put rain making on a scientific basis explained his work here recently to a conference of Canadian and United States government officials.

Tall, youthful-looking Dr. Vincent J. Schaeffer of Schenectady, N.Y., addressed a joint meeting of the Columbia River Basin forecast committee and the western snow conference. The meeting was attended by more than 100 officials from British Columbia and eight American states.

Employed by the General Electric company for 29 years, Dr. Schaeffer has been in the research department for 20 years.

During the Second World war he did research work on aircraft icing for the U.S. government and discovered that icing occurred because of super-cooled clouds.

"It was while studying why clouds super-cooled that I discovered how to make rain," Dr. Schaeffer said in an interview.

Not only did his studies show him how to make rain, he added, but how to prevent thunder, lightning and hail.

The 44-year-old researcher said his work now on producing certain types of weather, and preventing others, was being done for the United States Signal Corps and the office of naval research.

General Electric, he said, was only interested in making rain from the scientific, and not commercial viewpoint.

Dr. Schaeffer himself, however, believes great benefits will some day be derived from control of the weather. He maintains that there should be government control of rainmaking and that there will be need of international agreements.

"Weather is no respecter of boundaries," he said, "so if we're going to do anything about it, there has got to be a plan on a large scale."

Dr. Schaeffer feels, too, that as the art of rainmaking is developed, there will be need for licensing those engaged in the practice in order to protect the public from unscrupulous operators.

While he discovered the method of seeding clouds with dry ice and silver iodide, he actually has yet to make any rain himself.

"I work in the laboratory," he said. "Others do the seeding."

He said that close to 1,000, and possibly more, rainmaking tests have been made so far and that results have been very successful.

OUR COMPLETE SHORT STORY

All For You, My Darling!

"Of Course The Best Of Everything For His Jenny"

By RUTH NEWLAND

AS SOON as I beheld her, I thought of a marriage license and not of her father's fortune. It was a sure sign I really was in love. When the charming creature smiled back, I felt my heart beat very fast and I heard a voice, mocking and sweet, say, "Ah, clever one, so you've fallen."

"Jenny, I love you. May I speak to your father and know my fate?" The modest girl lowered her soft brown eyes. The small voice said, "They're closing in on you."

Next day I changed into a machine which concentrated on making enough money to realize all my dreams of Jenny. I was given to understand that, to marry her, I must have in my bank book a sum of four digits.

Life began to have surprising revelations. Five o'clock in the morning was not only the hour of going to bed. It was also the time to get up. The money one could earn before breakfast!

"Jenny, this month I've earned an extra $500 . . ."

Our house would be a place where she'd reign as queen.

"What shall it be?" I asked her in a happy moment.

"A cottage of eight rooms with a garden and antique furniture," she answered.

"Fifteen thousand dollars," said the builder, when I described Jenny's dream. "And if you want imported marble for the mantel . . ."

"Of course, the best of everything for my Jenny."

"In that case, $17,500," said the builder.

Each hour of sacrifice was a joy to me. Love gave me strength. When the eyes of my beloved looked at me my heart seemed about to burst through my shirt. Ah, love.

I spoke to the architect. "Would solid oak doors and antique door knobs be very dear?" An idea of my Jenny's. She spends much time in antique shops.

"An extra $2,500," he said.

"We must have the best."

When May arrived, the dream house was a wonderful reality. Like a fairy castle the cottage raised its beautiful face, offering the last word in comfort, even luxury.

"You're wonderful," my Jenny told me as she stood before our house, which to me looked like a mirage.

A week later they played the Wedding March, while my bride held my arm. Weak but triumphant, I marched down the aisle, having given a kingdom to my darling.

The love that Jenny lavished on each brick, each piece of marble, each piece of furniture, was extraordinary. I saw evidence of her love, returning from work.

"Take care, foolish man. Can't you see the floor was just washed?"

"Excuse me, dearest. Don't be angry. I did it without thinking."

"Not through those hedges, they've just been cut."

"Excuse me, love. I'll be careful."

I sat down on one of the sofas to recover from what I'd heard. But I was pulled up.

"You'll soil the upholstery with your work clothes."

I went to change my clothes in the bedroom.

"Fool, watch that carpet. Don't scrape the polish off the steps."

I left my coat on the back of a chair. Jenny yanked it off and gave it to me with a hanger.

"That's a dining room chair. I've told you a hundred times not to leave things around."

The house, the furnishings, the ornaments, all that I've bought with great sacrifice for her, all have displaced me with her, have set me aside.

I was overcome with strong hatred for all which was my own doing.

"Fool that I am," I said to myself with regret.

And if I did not propose to Jenny that she choose between the house, the furnishings, the ornaments and me, it was only to spare myself hearing her say:

"I'll take them."

Calgary Pilot Rescued In Korea

Lieut. Irwin L. Bowman, R.N., of Calgary, Alta., (left), happily relates how he was rescued from enemy territory by a U.S. helicopter to an officer aboard the cruiser U.S.S. Manchester in Wonsan harbor, Korea, after his fighter plane was shot down by enemy anti-aircraft fire. Lieut. Bowman's plane was hit as he and his wingmates from the aircraft carrier H.M.S. Thesus strafed and rocketed Red targets south of Hamhung. The Manchester helicopter sustained no damage during the rescue mission, although enemy gunfire ripped the air close to the craft. Bowman, watching the helicopter approach his plane which he had crash-landed in a rice paddy said: "I saw the flak bursting around the helicopter. I don't know how it ever missed being hit."—Central Press Canadian.

Shortage Of Help

YORKTON, Sask.—A shortage of help in several fields of employment is already noticeable in this area, R. Panzer, manager of the unemployment insurance commission office here reported. The shortage is particularly noticeable in obtaining agricultural workers, waitresses, and domestics. Although farmers are paying as much as $90 a month plus room and board, the jobs remained unfilled, Mr. Panzer said.

Company Plans Oil Test South Of Regina

CALGARY.—Shell Oil company announced it will start drilling operations on a wildcat venture in southern Saskatchewan about 85 miles south of Regina and 14 miles north of the United States border.

The company, which holds about 2,000,000 acres of crown permits in Saskatchewan, will drill about 10,000 feet as a devonian test, the first such deep test since the recent devonian discovery in neighboring North Dakota.

Several other wildcats are expected by Calgary oil circles to make devonian tests in southern Saskatchewan this year.
